Our Story

Humble Beginning...

Oklahoma's commercial oil and gas industry was born in 1897 in Bartlesville, Indian Territory, when the Cudahy No. 1 "Nellie Johnstone" oil well came in a gusher.

Investors George Keeler and William Johnstone came to this area of the Cherokee, Delaware and Osage in the early 1870s to engage in the lucrative fur trade. Other traders included Nelson Carr, who built a gristmill on the north bank of the Caney River in 1870, and Jake Bartles, who bought the mill and added a flour mill and general store.

In the early 1880s, Johnstone and Keeler went to work for Bartles and in 1884 they opened a competing store on the river's south bank.

Keeler and Johnstone wanted to bring the AT&SF Railroad to their side of the river and when Keeler saw oil scum on the surface of the Sand Creek in 1875, the seeds were planted. In 1896, after lobbying the Cherokees and the Department of Interior, they secured an oil lease.

They were also campaigning to win approval to charter a town site near their store. Bartlesville was incorporated on January 15, 1897, as the Cudahy Oil Company began rigging up their well site on the edge of the new town. On March 25, 1897, at a depth of 1,303 feet, the well was shot with nitroglycerine, gushed to life and Bartlesville – the energy city – was born.

The Boom

In 1899, the AT&SF Railroad completed its depot on the south bank, the first oil trains departed for Kansas refineries, and Jake Bartles moved his store north to found the town of Dewey, named after Admiral George Dewey, whose victory at Manila Bay was current news.

The prospect of oil was a magnet for oilmen, lease hounds, drillers and roustabouts. By 1904 more than 100 wells had been drilled in the Bartlesville area and pipelines laid to the Coffeyville, Kansas refinery. In 1907, the city celebrated statehood as the home of over 120 oil companies.

Petroleum Pioneers

Young engineer H.V. Foster arrived in 1902 to manage his family's blanket oil lease on all 1.5 million acres of the Osage Lands. Soon he divided the lease into smaller acreages and sublet these to other drillers, creating the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company.

In 1930, Edward Buehler Delk designed Foster's La Quinta Mansion, now the home of Oklahoma Wesleyan University. Foster sold ITIO to Cities Services Oil Company in 1941 for $70 million, making Cities Service the 10th largest oil company in the United States.

Other legendary pioneers got their start subleasing from ITIO. Attorney George Getty visited Bartlesville in 1903 and sublet 1,100 acres for $500. Young son J. Paul Getty bought 100 shares in his father's Minnehoma Oil Company for $5 and their first well hit pay dirt. The Getty family stayed in Bartlesville for extended periods of time and J. Paul Getty spent summers as a roustabout throughout his teenage years.

Banker and barber Frank Phillips arrived in Bartlesville in 1904 and started Citizen Bank and Trust. Brother L.E. Phillips joined him and they drilled on a sublease north of town. Their 4th well, the Anna Anderson, came in a gusher and was followed by 80 straight producing wells.

Frank built his Bartlesville mansion, now the Frank Phillips Home, in 1909. When oil skyrocketed during World War I, the brothers acquired another sub-lease, brought in a gusher, which produced 100 barrels per day, and formed Phillips Petroleum Company in 1917 with 27 employees.

Innovation

Utility magnate H. L. Dougherty came to Bartlesville in 1912 to organize the Empire Gas and Fuel Company, which opened a research facility in 1916. Dougherty and the Chamber of Commerce secured a U.S. Bureau of Mines Petroleum Research Center for Bartlesville in 1918. Empire Gas would later become Cities Service Oil Company.

Phillips Petroleum added its own research center in 1925, the same year Frank established his Woolaroc Ranch retreat. Phillips successfully promoted its new aviation fuel in 1927 when the Woolaroc plane, piloted by Art Goebels, won the historic Dole Pineapple Race.

Phillips attracted Russian immigrant Armais Arutunoff to Bartlesville in 1928. Arutunoff invented an electric submersible motor that could pump oil from deep inside wells. He founded the REDA Pump Company in 1930, which later merged with TRW. The Bartlesville plant is now owned and operated by Schlumberger.

In 1956 Phillips Petroleum opened the world's first commercial plastics technical center, which pioneered a multitude of uses for Phillips' innovative plastic such as Marlex and K-Resin. The center is now a division of Chevron Phillips Chemical Company.

Also in 1956, Bartlesville saw the completion of Frank Lloyd Wright's only skyscraper, the Price Tower. The building was the corporate headquarters of the H.C. Price Company, one of the world's leading pipeline construction firms.

Phillips Petroleum and Conoco merged in 2002 to become ConocoPhillips. ConocoPhillips repositioned as ConocoPhillips and Phillips 66 in 2012. Bartlesville now serves as the global services center for both corporations, as well as the research arm of Phillips 66.

Energy industry products and services brought international giant ABB to Bartlesville in 1999. Service and Technology Corporation opened in 1986. They operate in a city that still boasts a small, but thriving, independent oil and gas industry.

Today

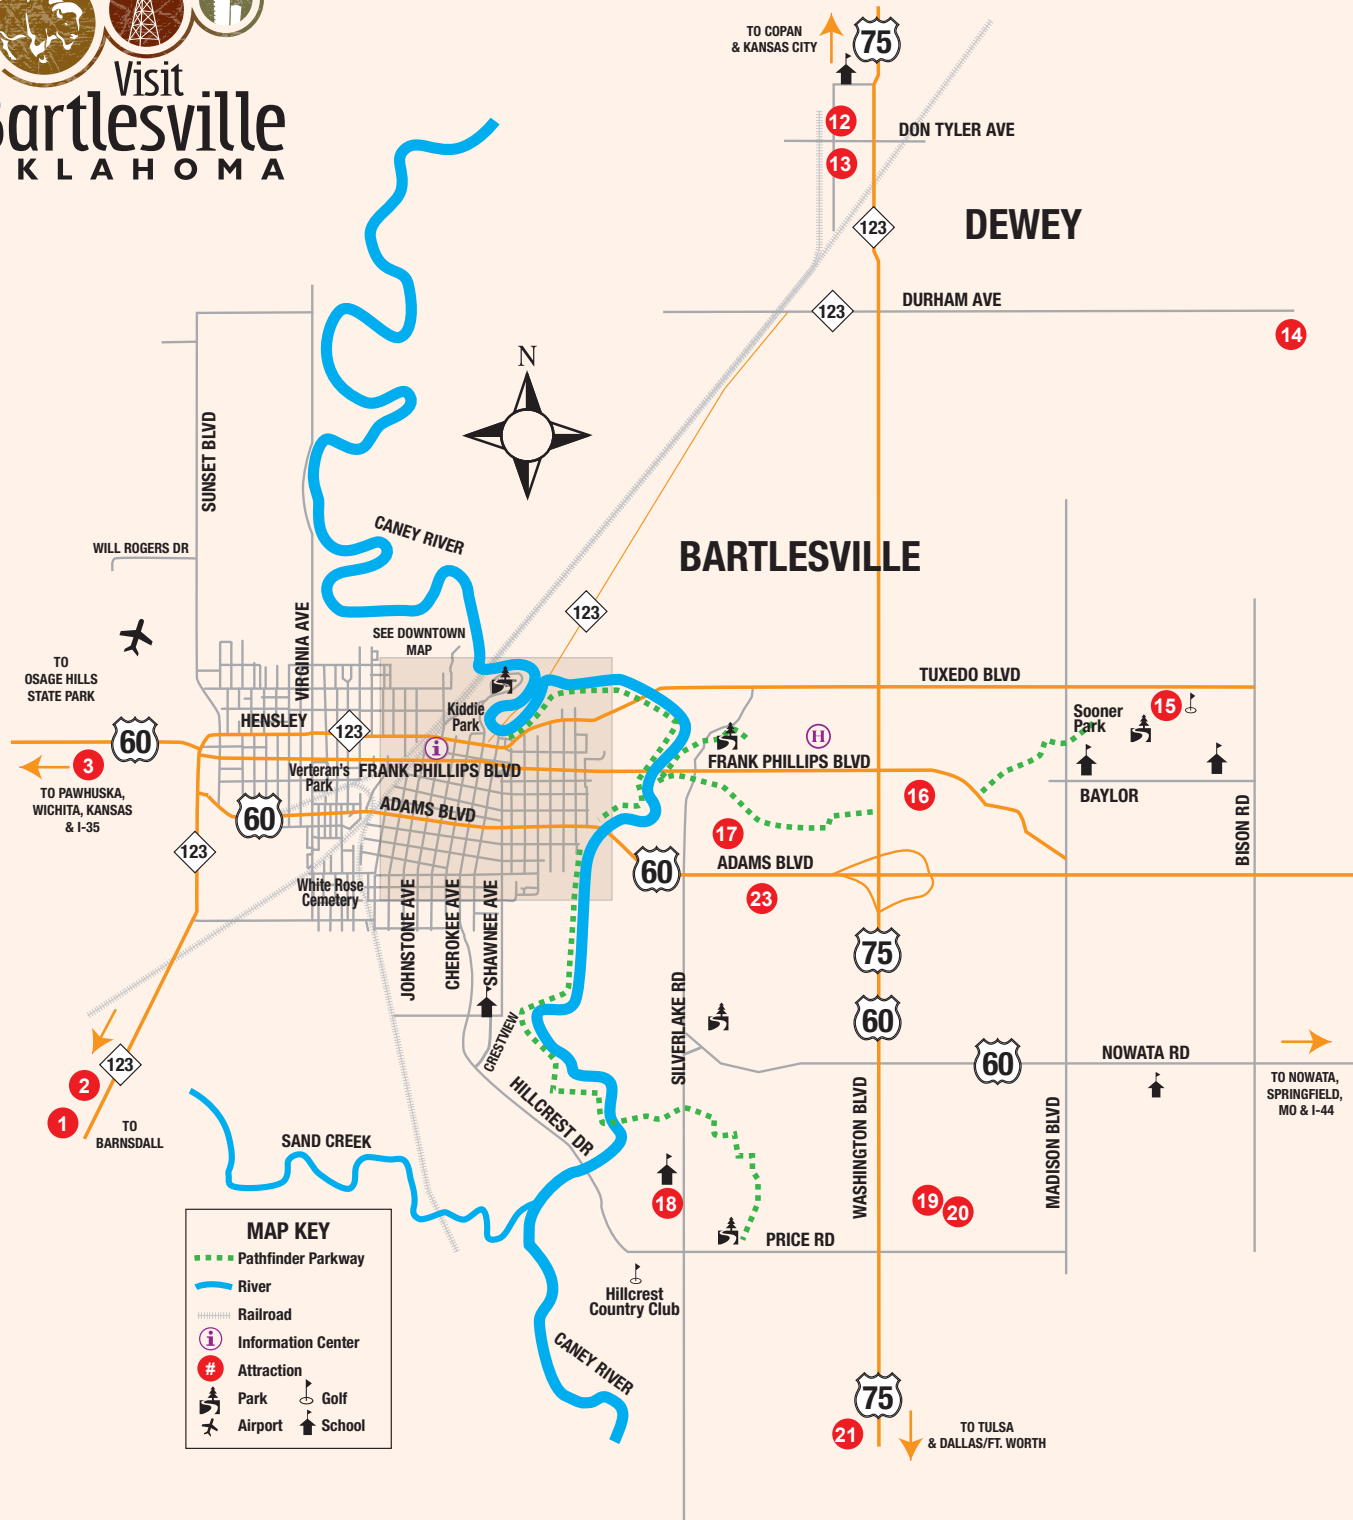

At the turn of the 20th century Bartlesville boomed with wildcatters and oil pioneers. Bartlesville residents of the 21st century work in the energy industry, health care, education and so much more. Many of these modern day pioneers can be seen in downtown restaurants and bars to enjoy varied cuisine and hear live music that is uniquely Oklahoma. While Bartlesville honors the past, we also embrace the future and love to celebrate.

Visitors and residents alike enjoy OKM Music Festival, Oklahoma Indian Summer, Sunfest, Dewey's Western Heritage Weekend and the Kiddie Park. Sports fans can watch American Legion Baseball at Doenges Memorial Stadium, Phillips 66 Gymnastics and Splash Club at Adams Gymnasium, and the competitive sports at Oklahoma Wesleyan University. Bartlesville Community Center presents the Broadway in Bartlesville series and also hosts the Bartlesville Symphony Orchestra, Bartlesville Choral Society and Bartlesville Civic Ballet. Theater Bartlesville is also nearby.

Our pioneering ways live on and Bartlesville remains an energy city. That energy means there is always something happening here. Come enjoy our fun, family-friendly atmosphere and discover history. Whether you're planning a family vacation, special event, athletic competition or business retreat, you'll find everything you need. Our affordability, hospitality and accessible location make for a memorable experience!

Frank Phillips Home

In 1909, a picturesque 26-room mansion was built by oil baron Frank Phillips, founder of Phillips Petroleum Company. Today, that fabulous home with its original furnishings remains in the heart of our community for all to see and tour. The impeccable grounds include a carriage house, greenhouse, and gardener's cottage making this the ideal location for your wedding or special event. Immaculately preserved for more than 100 years, this National Register Historic Site reflects the lifestyle of one of Oklahoma's greatest oil barons and a rich part of our city, state and national history. Fittingly, the home is operated by The Frank Phillips Foundation which also manages Woolaroc Museum & Wildlife Preserve, another Frank Phillips family property.

Visit this Oklahoma Centennial Project to see a working replica of Oklahoma's first commercial oil well and view a 19th century cable tool drilling rig in operation. Then, thrill to the GUSHER that put Bartlesville and Oklahoma oil on the map. Docent led tours are available March through November by appointment. The rig and static displays are open year-round.

Oklahoma oil began on March 25, 1897 when the Nellie Johnstone No. 1 oil well came in a gusher on the banks of the Caney River. The news of oil in commercial quantities at Bartlesville, Indian Territory, in the Cherokee Nation just east of the Osage Nation, prompted the Santa Fe Railway to lay track to the town site. Wildcatters, lease hounds and roustabouts hopped trains to Bartlesville and the boom was on!

La Quinta Mansion

The La Quinta Mansion was designed in 1930 by noted Kansas City architect Edward Buehler Delk. H. V. Foster, once known as the wealthiest man west of the Mississippi, located his new home on 152 acres, three miles from the center of town. The 32-room, Spanish-style mansion has 14 bathrooms and seven fireplaces. Construction was completed in 1932 and it served as the family home until Mr. Foster's death in 1939. After that La Quinta served, consecutively, as the home of military school Central Christian College and Central Pilgrim College. The Wesleyan Church now owns and operates Oklahoma Wesleyan University, an accredited, four year liberal arts college. La Quinta is the focal point of the campus and serves as the administration facilities for the school. La Quinta is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Prairie Song Pioneer Village

The past is remembered, and vividly alive, at this recreated 1800s pioneer village. The village features a total of 30 buildings including a two-story saloon, Scudder Schoolhouse, Wildwood Chapel, cowboy line shack, homestead cabin, post office, trading post, school marm's house, rock jailhouse, covered bridge, rock depot and much more! Each structure was built with hand-hewn Arkansas "bull pine" and Missouri red and white oak.

Prairie Song has been restocked with Texas longhorns, the original breed of cattle driven up the trail. Visitors can enjoy a glimpse of life from days gone by as they watch the longhorn cattle graze on the bluestem prairie that has never been touched by the steel plow.

This lifelike replica of a 1800s pioneer village stands in the midst of an authentic working ranch and shows life, work and play as it was in those days.

This is a magical wedding site and group functions are available by reservation.

This is a working ranch, so please call to arrange a tour time.

Windle's Rock & Jewelry Shop

Serving customers with a wide range of products and services for over 55 years. Our reputation for honesty and fairness has earned the repeat business of generations of people, some of whom travel across the country (and even the world!) to bring us their priceless pieces for repair or just a check up. Products range from fine diamond engagement rings to spectacular colored stone to handmade Native American pieces and everything in between. In addition to repairs we also design and make custom jewelry.

AT&SF Steam Locomotive No. 940

The Union Depot in downtown Bartlesville is home to Santa Fe engine No. 940, the last remaining locomotive of its type out of 332 such steamers that saw service. Visitors can enter the locomotive's cab at any time and ring the steamer's big bell. Plus, every Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., visitors can also blow the 940's powerful whistle.

Built by Baldwin in 1903 and operated for a half century in Oklahoma and five other states, the 940 was equipped to handle heavy freight trains at a top speed of about 35 miles an hour. Coupled behind this last-of-its-kind locomotive are two beautifully restored rail cars -- a 1914 oil tank car bearing the "Flying A" logo of the long-gone Tidewater Associated Oil Company and a sturdy Santa Fe caboose, built in 1948. The restored interior of the caboose is open for tours periodically.

The Bartlesville Union Depot, completed in December 1909, once served by two major railroad lines --the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe (the "Santa Fe") and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas (the "M-K-T" or "Katy"). Built by the Santa Fe in its trademark architectural style, the carefully maintained structure is currently home to the Visitor Information Center operated by Visit Bartlesville as well as the Bartlesville Regional Chamber of Commerce and the Bartlesville Development Authority.

Three blocks south of the depot along tracks now owned by the South Kansas & Oklahoma Railroad (SKOL) is a 1923 coaling tower built for the MKT. The structure is one of only two like it left in Oklahoma.

Pawhuska

In the heart of the Osage Nation the community of Pawhuska is alive with activity. The Osage Tribal Museum is located here on the grounds of the Nation's Capitol. Represented in the museum are themes from pre-history, warfare and traditional arts, as well as contemporary Osage artists.

Those "in-the-know" will also associate Pawhuska with Ree Drummond – The Pioneer Woman of Food Network fame. This city turned country lady has transformed one of Pawhuska's prime downtown structures into "The Merc", a shopping and dining destination that has lured thousands of followers from across the nation, to the quaint community of Pawhuska.

Bartlesville Heritage Trail-Downtown District

Downtown Bartlesville was listed as a Historic District on the National Registry of Historic Places in 1991.

Once you visit us, you'll understand why. The blend of architecture reflects the many influences upon our city -- from the early Prairie Style brought in by the first settlers to the high-rise corporate skyline built in the late 20th Century. And the stories behind the building faces will entice you as much as the architecture.

The Bartlesville Heritage Trail Walking Tour Booklet will lead you to 72 historic sites in downtown Bartlesville. You can see photos of these historic buildings along with descriptions of each site's history. Tour Booklets may be purchased at the Visit Bartlesville offices located at 201 S. Keeler.

While walking around our historic downtown district take a few minutes to stop in at our unique shops and restaurants for hometown flavors and unique gifts, visit the museums, galleries and local attractions.

Sports and Recreation

The centerpiece of recreation and sports in Bartlesville is the Pathfinder Parkway, a 16-mile jogging and biking trail that began in 1976 as Bartlesville's American Bicentennial project. Much of the trail runs along the Caney River and directly connects JoAllyn Lowe, Robinwood and Johnstone parks.

At Johnstone Park the trail is close to softball fields, indoor and outdoor skateboard parks, Kiddie Park amusement park, the Richard Kane YMCA which sponsors youth football and basketball and the fully renovated 1931 Doenges Memorial Stadium.

Built for the city's former minor league baseball team, Doenges Stadium has been home to American Legion Baseball for decades and was the site of 2003 and 2007 American Legion World Series. The annual Glen Winget Tournament takes place over the July 4 holiday. Bartlesville High School also plays at Doenges Stadium along with some Oklahoma Wesleyan University games.

Travel the Pathfinder to Robinwood Park, the center of the Washington County Soccer Program, then south to new tournament quality soccer fields, alongside Cooper Dog Park and Lee Lake.

Pathfinder extends east to Sooner Park, site of the newly renovated 1964 Sooner Park Play Tower, a unique 50-foot high structure designed by architect Bruce Goff. Look down from the tower on the Adams Municipal Golf Course, Sooner Junior Miniature Golf Course and disc golf course (all are 18 holes), sand volleyball facilities, one of two municipal swimming pools and a splash pad.

Bartains have loved basketball since 1919 when the Phillips 66er's Industrial Basketball Team played its first game. The 66ers were the best-known Industrial League team in the country. They won 11 American Athletic Union championships between 1940 and 1963 and six straight titles from 1943 to 1948. They played their last game in 1968. Today, the Bartlesville Sports Commission coordinates events like the Great American Conference NCAA Division II basketball tournament in March.

The Phillips Splash Club has been a leader in competitive diving and swimming since the 1950s, and the Phillips 66 Gymnastics Club, organized in 1966, may be the oldest club in the country. Additionally, in keeping with the growing international reach of local employers, both rugby and cricket are played in Bartlesville.
